

Fragments of a Forgotten
Symphony

kindle & gonzález

A visual poetry about transience, memory and the resilience of humans and nature.

In their series Fragments of a Forgotten Symphony, Michaela Kindle and Daniel Ricardo González create fascinating digital photo collages in which abandoned spaces, marked by the passage of time, are interwoven with vibrant elements such as blossoms, animals, plants, and the silent presence of female figures. This connection between decay and new life forms a powerful metaphor for the cycle of transience and return.

The collages are more than mere visual compositions – they are a dialogue between past and present, between reality and imagination. In the emptied spaces once filled with life, the present germinates: Nature permeates the old, causing it to blossom, and tells stories that live on in silence.

An echo of memory – traces of what was, and at the same time, a sign of the permanence of emotion, connection, and inner strength. Their visual worlds invite us to pause, to retrace forgotten stories, and to recognize the beauty that resides even in the transient.

With emotional depth and surreal imagery, Kindle and González create a visual microcosm of human experience – a mosaic of memory, nature, and hope.

In the still structure of change, opposites converge to open space for the unexpected. Light breaks through the familiar, turning fixed order into a living, open dialogue. What was once separate now stands quietly connected – a gentle sign of ongoing transformation.

Resurrection

From the heart of decay, a whisper grows that knows change – soft, yet unstoppable. Silence fills the space between what was and what will be, until it begins to glow. A rising breeze of memory and resonance sweeps through, carrying the quiet certainty of awakening. Here, strength begins.

Six Feet Above

A delicate step into the unknown, where horizons stretch wider. A flow between worlds, where the familiar shifts and new paths appear like distant lights. It's a hovering in between – a quiet awakening lifting the soul into new dimensions.

As we release, the old fades away – like shadows dissolving into the night. A quiet space opens, woven from unseen threads of what was always meant to be. Something new stirs, soft but sure, ready to unfold. Between the ending and the beginning, a delicate balance lingers – tender, timeless, drawn by the pull of what's next.

Rest

Time moves in soft circles, weaving a veil of fleeting memories and unspoken longings. Where the past meets the present, an invisible thread pulls the soul gently home – tender, yet impossible to escape. A quiet dance of letting go and yearning keeps a place in the heart alive – one that time cannot erase.

Between farewell and anticipation, a quiet wonder flickers – a pause where memory and possibility overlap. From time's current, something new forms, shaped by movement, light, and soft contrast. At the meeting of opposites, a gentle conversation begins – fragile as a breath, strong as a fresh start. Here lies the quiet promise of what might be.

Resilience is not shown in rebellion, but in quiet unfolding. Amidst rupture and emptiness, new life is forming – not beyond the wound, but out of it. What seems fragile often contains the greatest strength: the ability to transform, to shine, to stay.

The curtain never truly fell – only time passed. In this hushed grandeur, instinct writes the overture, and nature takes its place under a dome of memory and light. Where walls remember dreams and silence blooms with color, the wild soul awakens – undaunted, untamed, eternal. A sanctuary not of stone, but of spirit.

Masquerade

In calm silence, decay and renewal meet as time flows softly through layers of being, shaping a self that's always moving. The world blurs at the edges, blending memory and possibility. Nothing disappears; everything shifts gently, endlessly onward.

In the face of decay, a delicate blossom emerges – a silent trace of what remains. Between the fading past and the emerging future, an invisible energy lingers, hovering between stagnation and becoming.

Menagerie

In the shadow of faded grandeur, the quiet play of comparison unfolds – those unseen measures that draw lines between us. Between delicate weightlessness and proud display, a tension emerges: longing and self-doubt intertwined. Yet in the release of comparison, true strength reveals itself: an inner striving, not to shine, but to grow – freely, authentically, and unshakably.

Daniel Ricardo González

kindle & gonzález

Michaela Kindle and Daniel Ricardo González are two artists whose distinct life paths and long-standing friendship converged in 2018 to form an inspiring artistic partnership. Since then, they have been merging their individual perspectives into expressive, collaborative works.

Daniel is a passionate photographer and world traveler with a particular fascination for forgotten places and their quiet histories. His journeys have taken him to numerous countries, where, with a keen sensitivity to light, space, and atmosphere, he captures visual traces of the past. His documentary approach provides a strong foundation for their shared artistic practice.

Michaela studied photography in the United States, where she discovered her fascination with the narrative and emotional potential of digital image creation. Her artistic signature is characterized by a refined sensitivity in her use of color, symbolism, and intuitive compositing. In her works, real elements merge with poetic layers, opening up new, multi-dimensional visual worlds.

What unites Michaela Kindle and Daniel Ricardo González is a shared longing for pictorial spaces that extend far beyond the visible. Their works are not linear narratives, but fleeting fragments of a journey through time – memories that drift like mist across landscapes, at times tangible, at times distant. They open spaces for contemplation, where perception and remembrance are entwined in a delicate dance.
